

WITNESS is proud to announce the publication of Video for Change: A Guide for Advocacy and Activism (October 2005 /Pluto Press, UK). Based on the work of WITNESS and other leading video advocates worldwide, this book is a must-read for human rights, environmental, and social justice organizations wanting to use video in their work. The book provides tips, a compelling range of case studies, and easy-to-use exercises on the range of strategic, technical and ethical issues involved in using video for advocacy, and can be used as a comprehensive guide by both the first-time and more experienced video-maker.

The publication is edited by a collaborative of four leading video activists including Sam Gregory (WITNESS), Gillian Caldwell (WITNESS), Thomas Harding (author of "The Video Activist Handbook" and co-founder of Undercurrents UK) and Ronit Avni (Just Vision), and features chapters by WITNESS staff and other guest authors, including Katerina Cizek, Joanna Duchesne and Sukanya Pillay, along with a preface by WITNESS co-founder Peter Gabriel. WITNESS will distribute Video for Change to our entire Partner Network of human rights groups, many of which will use the materials to train other locally-based groups, reaching hundreds if not thousands of advocates worldwide. To purchase copies at a 20% discount off the list price, visit the online Store section at www.witness.org and enter the code VFC05 when checking out. You can also read an outline of the book's chapters and download chapters for free.
